Secrets to deep relationships:

- asking deep questions
- talking about deep relationships with the person.
- going camping with the person.
- make the person a part of your life (this may not work, though - think about many years, but we may not know anything deep about them - might want to ask that person a deep question to get things going)
- make up something deep about the person and then ask "is this true?" ("i heard you have a whole other side to you - that is very interesting and i want to ask if this is true")
- avoid using pseudonyms, use your proper first and last name and avoid other kinds of lying. (although you might pseudonym that's just for deep relationships - these special names are code for "i know you deeper" and don't take pictures of yourself with the person because pictures make the relationship not as deep - unless it's a very old picture)
- touch the person on the arm just once and no more.
- promise to meet the person one hour from now in the same spot (secret rendezvous technique, for time and need a deep relationship)
- joke and laugh - those seemingly light things are surprisingly deep
